operations, essential maintenance and essential training come first. Their Lordships are anxious that official Naval celebrations should be modest and coupled with full recognition of tasks still to be completed in the Far East. Commanders in Chief should exercise their discretion in applying detailed instructions below.

5. Routine on Ve-Day. Ships companies should be piped down after divisions. Special instructions are being issued about leave.
6. Dressing ship. H.M. Ships in port should dress with masthead flags on Ve-Day and Ve plus one from time of announcement of referred to in para. 2 (A).
7. Illuminations. If the coastal lighting restrictions have been relaxed H.M. Ships in harbour may assist in local illumination on Ve-Day or Ve plus one.

NAVAL MESSAGE

From:

8. Special meals. No special meals to be provided.
9. Special parades. Between Ve-Day and thanksgiving Sunday, both dates inclusive, Commanders in Chief may arrange special parades both purely Naval and in conjunction with other services as they consider appropriate. Naval units may also participate in ceremonies arranged by local authorities. In deciding between competing claims Commanders in Chief should generally give preference to those localities with Naval associations. Admiralty will issue special instructions concerning Naval participation in national ceremonies on thanksgiving Sunday.
10. Foreign ports. Arrangements will be at the discretion of Commanders in Chief or Senior Naval officer present in consultation with local authorities.

On the occasion of the ending of hostilities with Germany, I am sending this special message of congratulations to everyone in the Canadian Northwest Atlantic Command.

2. Every Officer and man who has served at sea, or on shore at Canadian East Coast bases or in Newfoundland, servicing and training the ships at sea, can think with pride of his personal share in the hard and successful teamwork that will place the Canadian Navy amongst the headlines ~~in~~ the history of the war.

3. I wish those who presently will return to civil occupation all good luck in the future. To those will continue in the Navy, and especially to those who will fight at sea against Japan, I wish a very happy interval until they sail, and desire nothing better than that I may have the privilege of commanding them and of continuing to serve them as they have served me.

ADMIRALTY

The German High Command has surrendered unconditionally all German land, sea and air forces in Europe, effective from 0001B hours 9th May from which hour all offensive operations are to cease.

Due to difficulties of communication there may be some delay in these orders reaching enemy forces. Accordingly, danger of attack by individual enemy surface craft, U-Boats and aircraft may persist for some time to come, The Fleet in all waters is to remain on a warfare footing and freighters a state of constant vigilance for the moment.

Surrender procedure for U-Boats will be promulgated separately. No release is to be made to the press pending an announcement by heads of Government.

Following message has been received by the first Sea Lord from Field Marshall Montgomery. Begins.

As C in C of the armies of the British Empire in Western Europe I would like today to salute you and the Royal Navy.

Throughout our long journey from Egypt to the Baltic any success achieved by the British armies has been made possible only by the magnificent support given us by the Royal Navy. With unfailing precision we have been put ashore, supported and supplied. Our confidence has been such that the army has never questioned the certainty of a safe landing nor of the safe arrival of our reinforcements and supplies across the seas.

I want to thank you and all those gallant sailors who have supported us with such valour. We soldiers owe the Royal Navy a great debt of gratitude and we will never forget.

NAVAL MESSAGE

From:

Would it be possible for you to convey the gratitude of myself and all those serving under me to all your Flag Officers and Captains and to all ranks and ratings of the Royal Navy. We wish the Royal Navy the best of luck. Ends.

The First Sea Lord has replied as follows. Begins.

On behalf of all officers and men of the Royal Navy. Thank you for your generous message.

Ever since the summer of 1940 the Royal Navy has been eagerly looking forward to the day when we could land the armies of the British Empire once again on the continent of Europe.

We sailors never doubted that when the day came the soldiers would however hard the struggle achieve ultimate victory in battle.

We have watched with profound admiration the progress of your operations which have now inflicted on the enemy an overwhelming and decisive defeat.

Our warmest congratulations and best wishes to you and to all ranks serving under your command.

On Ve-Day, while the battle for which the Western Approaches Command was created to fight, draws to a victorious close, I send this personal message of gratitude and admiration to all of you who have so faithfully and nobly borne the brunt of the long drawn out struggle.

In winter gales of the North Atlantic, and every kind of weather the littleships of this command have kept continual close touch and faith with those they had to guard. But this alone was not enough. High technical skill reached only by intense training added to that seaman's eye, and judging with long experience at sea under the hardest conditions given, producing the polish which earned your great but still unnumbered successes.

The standards you have set and maintained in anti-submarine warfare are in my opinion quite unsurpassed by any of the combattant nations, and your standards in all other respects have been a source of pride and joy to me.

Your losses have been heavy indeed and our thoughts at this time must constantly turn to our comrades and friends who have paid the price of victory.

In thanking you for your unfailing loyalty and support and wishing you good luck, remember it is still too early to relax. Utmost vigilance is necessary until the last German U-Boat is surrendered.

Following from the Minister.

On this great day I send to every Officer and rating of the Royal Canadian Navy and its reserves my personal congratulations. The part you have all played to help accomplish this results has been valiant now we can look forward to an end to the tedious work in the convoys, to the hazardous hunting in the support groups, to the fights by night in the destroyer flotillas, to the strikes from the carriers, the assaults in the MTBs and to the patrols in the minesweeping groups. All have helped to accomplish the common aim. Germany is beaten again. In this moment of victory I know you will be saddened when you think of those who have given their lives that we all might live once more in peaceful homes. This is their great day too and while they are not with us to rejoice we must see to it and we will see to it that their memory is kept
