Official transportation for special events will be provided at the times shown in the attached schedule. On completion of these trips, the vehicles will return to their garages.

Those vehicles assigned to the visiting ships for general duties during working hours will be controlled by the Liaison Officer. The Liaison Officer should be contacted by the Officer of the Day of the visiting ship should he require the use of these vehicles.

Public Transportation

The main shopping and entertainment area of the City of Montreal is not far from the EXPO 67 site. To reach this area of the city, public buses, a subway, and taxis are readily available.

The Metro, Montreal's subway system, has a station right on the site, on St. Helen's Island.

Regarding transportation in Montreal, the following should be noted: -

1. Fares are paid on entering buses and the Metro; transfers can be obtained to continue the trip on other buses or the Metro.
2. Taxi fare is computed only on the basis of the trip mileage and the duration of the trip; the number of passengers, up to 5 are permitted, does not increase the fare.

SECTION IV

Canada in 1967

Early History

It is probable that early Vikings touched on Canada's east coast, but the first recorded landing is that of the Italian-born English explorer John Cabot in 1497. In 1534 the French navigator Jacques Cartier took possession of the Gaspé Peninsula for France and explored as far as the island of Montreal. In 1608 Samuel de Champlain established Quebec City, a settlement that became the capital of New France. Montreal was founded in 1642 by Chomedey de Maisonneuve.

British-French rival claims to Canada were finally resolved when the British under General Wolfe, defeated the French General Montcalm on Quebec's Plains of Abraham in 1759. The War of 1812, in which Canada turned back an attempted invasion by the United States of America, confirmed most of the already established U. S. - Canadian boundary.

Confederation -- July 1, 1867

Confederation of the provinces of Canada became a fact when the British Parliament passed the British North America Act providing for the federal union of the British North American provinces in one Dominion under the name of Canada. The new nation came into being on July 1, 1867 and consisted of four provinces: Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. In the next few years, five other provinces joined the Dominion. Finally in 1949, Newfoundland became Canada's tenth province.

Federal Government

Canada is a completely self-governing member of the British Commonwealth of Nations. The British Sovereign, recognized as the Queen of Canada, is represented in Canada by a Governor General, appointed by the sovereign on the recommendation of the Canadian government. He nominally holds executive powers but in fact acts only with the advice of the Canadian prime minister and his cabinet.

There are two houses in the federal Parliament; the House of Commons whose members are directly elected for five-year terms; and the Senate, whose members are appointed by the Governor General. The federal government is responsible to the House of Commons.

Provincial Government

In each of the provinces the Queen is represented by a Lieutenant-Governor, appointed by the Governor General. The legislature of each province consists of a legislative assembly, elected by the people for a five-year term. The legislative assembly of each province is only responsible to the people who have elected its members.

SECTION V

Montreal...

Canada's Metropolis

History

In 1535 Jacques Cartier, an adventurous mariner from St. Malo, France, and his crew set sail northwest across the Atlantic. They found the Gulf of St. Lawrence and sailed up a river larger than any they had ever seen, to the present site of Montreal.

Samuel de Champlain landed at this same location, 75 years later, to set up Place Royale as a fur-trading post and finally, on May 17, 1642, the Sieur Chomedey de Maisonneuve founded Ville-Marie, later to be called Montreal.

Between 1642 and 1760, many explorers, traders, and missionaries from Montreal, among them such people as d'Iberville, Cavalier de la Salle, Joliet, Marquette, Duluth, and Cadillac de Lamothe, extended French territorial possessions from Hudson's Bay to the Gulf of Mexico. At least 35 of the 50 American States have either been discovered, explored, or settled by early Frenchmen.

Economic Centre

In the meantime Montreal never relinquished its economic supremacy in Canada. Its expansion under the early English regime was slow but gained momentum with the beginning of the nineteenth century. Montreal's location made it ideal as a commercial, shipping and railroad centre. McGill, Smith, Stephen and Van Horne are just a few of the Montrealers who contributed greatly to the expansion and development of the city and of the country during this era.

To-day, Montreal remains the industrial, commercial and transportation centre of Canada. Its annual output of goods and services through 35,000 establishments of all kinds is currently valued at eight billion dollars. It is one of the great cities of the New World, ranking seventh among the most important urban centres in North America.

Montreal is the head office of many business organizations operating nationally, or in a number of provinces. Five of the eight Canadian chartered banks have their head offices in the city.

Transportation Centre

Montreal is the centre of a vast river and ocean transportation network, of an immense railway network, and of a huge web of highways. It is, in fact, the biggest inland seaport in the world. The St. Lawrence Seaway, a 27 foot (8 metres) deep waterway, opened in 1959 by the former President of the United States of America, Dwight D. Eisenhower and Queen Elizabeth II, was built at a cost of over $600,000,000 and has its mouth in Montreal harbour. The St. Lawrence Seaway allows ships to penetrate 1,200 miles inland to reach Chicago, Detroit, Toronto and the head of the Great Lakes.

Canada's two big railway companies, Canadian National and Canadian Pacific, have their head offices in Montreal. Canadian National is the largest railway system in the world.

Montreal is also the site of the headquarters of two international aviation organizations; the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO), a specialized United Nations institution, and the International Air Transport Association (IATA), an airline association. Montreal International Airport is the biggest airport in Canada. Most of the world's largest airlines have offices here. The head office of Air Canada, the major Canadian airline is located in Montreal.

Geography

The island of Montreal, 32 miles (51 km) long and 10 miles (16 km) wide at its broadest point, is situated at the junction of the fluvial arteries which link the Great Lakes, in the heart of the North American continent, with the Atlantic ocean some 1,000 miles to the east. The City of Montreal with an area of 60 square miles (155 km<sup>2</sup>), shares the island with 29 other autonomous municipalities. The island is linked with its neighbours across the surrounding waters by more than 17 bridges and one tunnel.

Along the St. Lawrence River is the harbour with 12 miles (19 km) of installations. In the center is a wooded mountain, called Mount Royal. Between the mountain and the river is the business heart of the city; to the North, West and East of the mountain are the residential districts.

Montreal proper has a population of about 1,400,000 of whom close to two-thirds are of French origin. About 20% are of Anglo-Saxon descent. Greater Montreal has a population of over 2,000,000 or more than a third of that of the Province of Quebec.

While emerging as a great cosmopolitan community, the city has retained the flavour of its French origin. There are more French-speaking people to-day in Montreal than in any other city of the world to the exclusion of Paris.

World's Fair City

Because of the unique character of Montreal it has been selected as the site of the 1967 World's Fair by the International Bureau of Exhibitions. This is the first time North America has ever had a "first category" IBE Fair. The classification means that at least 30 IBE member nations are committed to setting up individual pavilions. More than 70 nations accepted the invitation to participate in EXPO 67.

Province of Quebec

Montreal is situated in the Province of Quebec, the largest of the Canadian provinces with its 594,000 square miles (1,539,000 km<sup>2</sup>). A French land for more than four centuries, it is fundamentally different from the vast Anglo-Saxon complex of the North-American continent. The hospitality of its population, the juxtaposition of its ancestral traditions and of its modern progress, and the bilingualism of the majority of its 5 million people make Quebec unique.

SECTION VIII

Montreal Night Life

Gourmets and night-life habitués generally agree that Montreal offers menus to tickle the most delicate palates and a good variety of night clubs and bars.

Three specific areas of Montreal are most impressive: New Montreal, Old Montreal and the Downtown Shopping Area. The Liaison Officer would be most happy to recommend restaurants and night clubs of all types in these areas.

New Montreal

New Montreal is the city of sky-scrappers surrounding Place du Canada and Dorchester Boulevard. Each year, more new office buildings and large hotels are constructed here.

In this area there are many good restaurants, most of them located in the larger office building complexes and hotels; among them Place Victoria, Place Ville-Marie, CIL House, Queen Elizabeth Hotel and Le Chateau Champlain. One of the most exciting but at the same time more expensive restaurants is the Altitude 737 on top of the Place Ville Marie. A supper club that serves a very good buffet, it provides a spectacular panoramic view of the city.

Old Montreal

Old Montreal, centered on St. Paul Street in the vicinity of the Montreal City Hall, is a living reminder of the history of Montreal with its old houses, its old streets, and its squares and monuments.

Until recently, primarily a business district, Old Montreal has in the past few years emerged as an area of many good restaurants and small theatres. French and Canadian menus are offered by most of these restaurants at a moderate price.

Downtown Montreal

Downtown Montreal, the area of large department stores and small shops, of many fine and varied restaurants, of discotheques and clubs, of art galleries and museums, is the heart of Montreal and the centre of its night-life. Some of the more popular places to visit in this area are: -

RESTAURANTS

A LA CREPE BRETONNE - 2080 Mountain St. 842-3481

A very nice place to eat and also inexpensive. Serves mostly French pancakes.

LA SOUPIERE - 2114 Mountain St. 849-6391

BEN'S DELICATESSEN - 990 Maisonneuve Blvd. 844-1001

All night delicatessen best known for its smoked meat sandwiches. Very popular spot for late, late snacks. Inexpensive.

DISCOTHEQUES

Discotheques, where couples dance to recorded music are a very popular form of entertainment in Montreal. All serve alcoholic beverages. Two of the most popular are: -

CHEZ PIERRE LEGRAND - 1220 St Catherine St. W. 866-2151

COPA CABANA - 1112 St Catherine St. W. 861-6224

NIGHT CLUBS

Establishments whose primary purpose is to entertain the visitor vary from those that present the most elaborate extravaganzas to those that cater to devotees of the art of exotic dancing. Some of the better known spots are: -

ROYAL FOLLIES - 5560 Sherbrooke St. W. 482-9000
An elaborate stage show in the tradition of large Parisian and Las Vegas clubs. Very expensive.

CASA LOMA - 94 St Catherine St. E. 861-6105
